The College is named in honor of Medgar Wiley Evers, an American civil rights activist from Mississippi, who worked to achieve social justice and voting rights for all people.

Among his enduring legacies is his work to gain admission for African Americans to state-supported public colleges.
Founded in 1970 by Central Brooklyn community leaders and organizations, Medgar Evers College (MEC) has the distinction of being the youngest of the four-year senior colleges in The City University of New York.
Located in the heart of Crown Heights, Brooklyn, the campus is a rich canvas for opportunities that positions the borough for superior connectivity to globalizing markets.
